PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY AND FRIDAY IN THE YEAR.

VOLUME XXVII

PARIS, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1907.

NUMBER 1.

Bert Southern and the Wheeler Sisters with the DePew-Burdette Stock Co., at the Paris Grand Monday night.

Our Twenty-Seventh Anniversary

With this issue the Bourbon News enters the twenty-seventh year of its existence without ever having missed getting out a single edition of the paper from its birth to this good time. Its present editor and owner, Mr. Swift Champ, has endeavored at all times to run a "home paper," and the hearty support it has received demonstrates how fully it has met the demand of the people. The columns of our paper speak for themselves as to what an advertising medium it is; if the paper did not give our merchants good returns for their advertising space, they would have long since stopped their ads.

The News is steadily Democratic and will continue to fight the battles of Democracy to the end of time. Our aim in the future will be as in the past, to make the paper a still greater power for good and a potent factor in the upbuilding of both town and county.

We have never been nor never will be the tool of any political ring or any clique, as papers often become, but will continue to be free and untrammelled to print the news and facts as we find them.

The circulation of the News is one of the largest of any semi-weekly in Kentucky, and we are glad to say is steadily increasing. The advertising and job patronage is the best in its history and we want to sincerely thank our patrons and will at all times in the future do our utmost to please them.

We have at the head of our job department, Mr. R. S. Porter, who for accuracy in turning out jobs of every description to please the public, has few equals and no superiors. If you want anything in the printing line from a visiting card to a 100 page book, or a sale bill to a circus poster you will find the Bourbon News job rooms the place to get them.

Free Tickets to the Opera House Next Week.

If you are lucky there is a chance for you securing two seats to see the DePew-Burdette Stock Company at the Grand next week, free of charge. Here is the plan, read it carefully. For Monday night's performance Manager Borland will give Dr. Oberdorfer, the druggist, who has charge of the advance sale, the numbers of two seats each in the dress circle, balcony and gallery. The person picking out these two seats when purchasing their tickets will be presented with them absolutely free. On Monday evening two other seats on each of the three floors will be selected, and the persons occupying them will be presented with the same seats free for the next night. This will be repeated every night during the week. The only consideration is that the tickets for Monday night must be purchased at Oberdorfer's drug store before 6 o'clock on Monday evening. Commencing Monday night, will be announced from the stage the numbers of the seats that will be given away the following night. Here is a good chance for you to see a good show absolutely free, and if you are lucky you may see it more than once. The earlier you buy your seats Monday the better chance you will have.

DePew-Burdette Stock Co.

The attraction at the Grand Opera House for one week starting Monday night will be the DePew-Burdette Company, one of the very best stock organizations now on tour.

This company is said to be a large one, and they claim to have a larger clientele than any other similar organization. Few plays have enjoyed such enduring popularity as "A Man of Mystery." Monday nights offering and the cause of its popularity is very apparent. The story of the play is one that appeals to all classes of theatre-goers and it would be a callous nature indeed that did not respond to the sentiments expressed in the clever tale. The company is augmented by a coterie of vaudeville artists whose between-act-stunts are a feature in themselves. Ladies will, as usual, be admitted free Monday night.

Our housekeepers say Spears & Sons' Red Cross Flour has no equal. Sold by all grocers. 24-4t

The Lumber Trust.

The Senate has ordered an inquiry into the operations of the Lumber Trust, which Senator Kittredge, of South Dakota declares is the "king of all trusts in restraint of trade—renorseless in its grasp on the people and the only change which it contemplates is to increase the price of its products at stated and frequent intervals, without regard to cost." He also said that "within the last five years the price of lumber and timber products have arbitrarily advanced from 100 to 500 per cent."

Senator Kittredge proposed to protect the people from this monopoly by having the federal government investigate the trust and suggested that there is a simple way to help break the power of this rapacious trust if Republican members of Congress were willing to do it, by cutting off the tariff protection. The tariff tax on lumber ranges from 10 to 64 per cent, of its value, and if lumber products were placed on the free list there would be considerable competition from Canada and other countries that have surplus lumber to sell. The ensuing competition under free lumber, joined with the criminal prosecution of the lumber barons, for no fine would probably have any effect on them, would break up the combination and trust and bring down the price of lumber to what it is worth.

It must be remembered, however, that the price of lumber will never again be anything like as low as in former years, for the stock of standing timber in the United States has been so depleted that what remains will naturally be sold for a much higher price than formerly.

It is singular that every Congressional district but one adjacent to the Canadian line where the voters would especially benefit by competing lumber is represented by a Republican, who all refuse to revise the tariff, or even allow the subject to be considered. And in the next Congress the same political alignment prevails with two exceptions. How can the settlers of South Dakota and other prairie states expect to be relieved from the exactions of the Lumber Trust if they continue to elect Republicans to represent them, who are pledged to continue the Republican tariff policy that protect the trusts?

It will take two years, if not more, for the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate and report on the Lumber Trust and then, if the Department of Justice thinks it can make a case against the Lumber Barons, there will be a long drawn out legal fight and during all that time the people will still be suffering from the prohibitive prices the Lumber Trust is charging.

In a week Congress could pass a bill placing lumber on the free list and thus give, at least, partial relief. Every thousand feet of lumber imported from Canada, or elsewhere, would relieve the lumber market of part of the strain the Lumber Trust now imposes on it. The trust rather than see its competitors underselling it would naturally reduce its prices to meet the competition.

But Senator Kittredge, like some other Republican Congressmen that want certain products relieved from the tariff tax, are unwilling to help the Democrats force a general revision of the tariff which would give relief from the present tariff high prices. They believe in the Republican policy of protecting the trusts, but cry out about some particular trusts, so as to appear to their constituents to favor tariff revision.

But the tariff cannot be revised in this way, for the trusts hang together for protection and the only way to rout them is to unhorse all the trust barons that are unduly protected at the same time and that will not be possible until the voters defeat more of the stand-patters that represent trust interests, rather than the interest of their constituents. As it is now one trust has more power with Republican Congressmen than 200,000 people have.

Consideration For Others.

Only three words! Yet it takes some a lifetime to understand just what they mean. If there is anything in this world which a mother should teach her children it is consideration for others. The lack of it is one of the sure signs of bad training. Snobbery never made a lady, and women or girls who never stop to consider others can and do cause some very bitter heartaches. A pathetic case was recently heard when mother looked down at her little hunchback child, a boy, crippled by falling, and said, with tears in her eyes: "I sometimes wish my little boy would die. He is the laughing stock of every child in the neighborhood, and goes to sleep many times crying in my arms at night." Can you imagine the agony a mother must suffer to see her own flesh and blood taunted by unruly children because of his misfortune? She would bear the untold agony of seeing him buried rather than have him suffer taunts. Last Christmas several little girls refused to sing in a church cantata because some of their classmates could not wear white dresses. And that is the beginning of church fellowship of life! A similar event occurred two years ago in an Eastern city. Two young girls refused to sing with a girl clerk because she could not dress well for the occasion. She left the church, but was kindly persuaded to return. She sang a solo and won the admiration of all present. As soon as the concert was over one of the men in the church called a meeting and proposed that instead of sending more missionaries to China and other places, they would train Mary's voice for the Master, and today she is one of the best singers in church circles. There is a little boy in St. Louis,—there may be hundreds just like him,—who recently left school because the scholars made fun of his old clothes. Pride is full grown even in boys. Do you blame him? Of course not; no one could. So be considerate and teach your children the same beautiful lesson.—Woman's National Daily.

Overcame Its Timidity.

The first time the House of Representatives tried to raise the salary limit to its members, somebody set up a cry of "Wolf! Wolf!" and the bill was not passed. In that case, the public was the wolf—or was supposed to be—and the gentlemen who wanted more money but didn't take it thought they were to be eaten as quickly as this horrible wolf could get to them. But the wolf was not there. In his place, it developed, there was a very harmless sheep which feebly said "Ba-a-a!" and went on about its business. There was no opposition. Indeed, it seemed to be the general idea that if the Representatives wanted more money there was no reason why they shouldn't take it, and there was as much criticism of their timidity as there was of the proposed salary.

That was the reason the House tried again. Having found a sheep where it believed it saw a wolf, at a second vote it took unto itself a comfortable increase—in pay, by a large majority. And nobody is kicking very hard. The public realizes that conditions have changed very much since the $5,000 salary limit was established, and is not losing sleep in expectation that the country will be thrown into bankruptcy. On the principle that the servant is worthy of his hire, it is probably true that if a man is good enough to be congressman he is good enough to be paid reasonably well for doing the work expected of him.

Whither Are We Drifting.

Upton Sinclair welcomes President Roosevelt as the greatest living Socialist and declares that Harriman is aiding Socialism by merging the transportation lines of the country under one management, which the Socialists believe will make it easier for the people to acquire them. But the question is, do the people of the United States want to acquire all the transportation lines and all the means of production and embark on the Socialist program which would make us servants of the state, instead of free agents? Although President Roosevelt is a friend of Mr. Sinclair, it will require more evidence than has so far been forthcoming to make the American people believe that he is rushing them into a Socialistic vortex from which there is no retreat. But it is a good time for all patriots to take stock of the leaders of parties and the principles of the parties endorse and arrive at a just conclusion on "whither are we drifting?"

May Escape Together.

There certainly will be a drain on the resources of the Standard Oil Trust if it is convicted of conspiracy in the 937 indictments found by the Hancock county, Ohio, grand jury. The total fines that can be imposed would aggregate $58,000,000. If the grand jurors of all the other counties in Ohio should also find indictments and should win in each case, what a fabulous sum the Trust would have to pay. But the Oil Trust, like the Sugar Trust, will probably get off with comparatively small fines and may escape altogether.

A SEAT OF MANY ILLS.

Eye Strain is Responsible for a Number of Ailments.

When the specialist to whom they had taken their sixteen-year-old daughter on account of what seemed to be a case of incipient melancholia diagnosed the case as one of eye strain and ordered prompt treatment from an oculist, the parents of a young New York girl were astonished. Eye strain seemed as remote from melancholia as would corns on the feet. Their astonishment was proportionately increased when after a few treatments and acquiring glasses the child showed noticeable improvement.

Latter day medical science traces to eye strain many ills which seem so remote from the eyes that formerly physicians never thought of establishing a connection between them. Sick headache, nervousness, melancholia, insomnia, are but a few which have of late been laid to the door of weak eyes; the proper treatment having been neglected.

Nervous diseases of the nature of St. Vitus' dance are now thought to originate frequently in eye trouble. The weak eyes blink incessantly, and this leads to a general contortion of the facial muscles, which grows on the subject through constant repetition.—Exchange.

The Names of Tea.

We talk glibly about Pekoe, Bohea, etc., but few people have any idea of what these names signify. "Pekoe" in the dialect of Canton means "white hair," for the tea which bears this name is made from the youngest leaves, so young that the white down is still on them. "Soochong" in the same dialect is a quite unpoetic name, it merely signifies "small kind." "Flourishing spring" is the meaning of "Hyson." "Kongou" signifies "labor." Much trouble and toil are expended in its preparation at Amoy, and these are commemorated in its name. "Bohea" is called after a range of hills. —Portland (Ore.) Journal.

To Clean Bronzes.

It is not a good plan to clean bronzes, as the polish is very easily spoiled, but if necessary nothing is better than cleaning them with water and ammonia, using a stiff brush like a nailbrush. Dry carefully after rinsing thoroughly. They should be carefully dusted every day with a soft cloth and a feather brush, and a little sweet oil may be rubbed on occasionally. To remove stains from bronze make the article very hot by dipping it in boiling water. Then rub it with a piece of flannel dipped in suds made from yellow soap, rubbing clean with soft linen cloths.

Switzerland a Modern Babel.

Switzerland, with its mixture of races and tongues, is a sort of modern Babel, a fact which causes much trouble in particular to the military authorities. At Wallenstadt the other day at the recruiting station there was a guard composed of five men. The chief was a lieutenant who spoke German only, the second a sergeant who spoke Italian only, the third a corporal who could speak French and Spanish, the fourth a private who could speak French and German, and the fifth a private who could speak French and Italian. When the lieutenant had to transmit an order to the sergeant he had to get the last named man to interpret for him. When he wanted to communicate with the corporal he had to requisition the fourth man, and so on, great delay and confusion being thus occasioned.—London News.

Shelley as a Boy.

Here is a glimpse of Shelley offered by Andrew Lang: "It seems almost incredible, but it is true, that I once knew a man who was at Eton with Shelley, who left in 1810. This was Mr. Hammond, a senior fellow of Mer-ton college when I was an inquiring junior. About 1870 he told me all that I could extract from him about the poet. 'Shelley was not a clever boy; he never was sent up for good,' which means, I conceive, that he never did a remarkable exercise in Latin verse. Mr. Hammond added that Shelley had a habit when he was walking alone of suddenly breaking into a sprint at a hundred yards pace. That was all."

She Didn't Do It.

The family jar waxed fiercer. "You talk about my being to blame for our marrying?" shrilly exclaimed Mrs. Vick-Senn. "John Henry, did I hunt you out and make love to you?" "No," he snorted. "But you could have given me the glassy eye and sent me about my business, and you didn't do it, madam—you didn't do it!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Gentlemen.

"Supposing I decide to let you have the money, how do I know that I shall get it back at the time you mention?" asked Brown.

"I promise it, my boy, on the word of a gentleman," replied Moore.

"Ah! In that case I may think better of it. Come around this evening and bring him with you."

None Left.

"A college education," declared the enthusiastic mother, "brings out all that is good in a boy."
"Yes," retorted William's father, "and in Bill's case I wish a little of it could have stayed in."—Cleveland Press.

NEW YEAR'S IN THE ORIENT

The Greetings and the Presents in China and Japan.

The most wonderful ceremonies connected with the new year occur in China and Japan. A Chinese city presents a busy and attractive spectacle on New Year's day. The streets are thronged with people dressed in gala attire. The mandarins are known by the red, blue, white and gilt balls on their caps. Gentlemen of rank and wealth are carried in palanquins. When friends meet they greet each other with "Kung-hi! Kung-hi!" which means, "I respectfully wish you joy." But instead of shaking hands in the American fashion each grasps his own hands, lifts them as high as his chin and with a sweeping motion throws them down as low as possible, bending the body at the same time. This is the mode of salutation among the Chinese. At the dawn of New Year's day the visits of congratulation begin, and New Year's gifts are sent to particular friends, always accompanied by a visiting ticket of red paper, on which are written the name of the donor and a list of the presents sent. These consist usually of silks, fine tea, sweetmeats, ornaments of personal wear, toys and souvenirs of various kinds. In Japan the custom is to send letters on rice paper to those in distant places, conveying the formal expression of the New Year's greetings. Presents of cooked rice, roasted peas, oranges and figs are offered to every one.—Leslie's Weekly.

ABUSE OF INDOORS.

We Rely Too Much on the Protection of Our Houses.

Houses were made for shelter, not for confinement; for freedom, not restraint. They were intended to enlarge our sphere of activities, not to diminish them.

They foster the family and make progress possible, but we should not abuse their protection. We have crawled away into their still and comfortable recesses, slept in their dry, clean chambers, toasted ourselves over their sheltered fires, read by their flickering lights and eaten from their bountiful boards so long that we are grown pale, timid, peevish and thankless within.

We have kept ourselves away from the wind and the sun and the lashing rain, from the feel of the earth underfoot and the sense of the leaves and stars overhead until we no longer know the keen and simple joys of being alive. We have set up barriers against the inclemency of nature and covered before her severe austerity until now we have forgotten how indispensable is all her kindly nurture, how tonic her rugged ways, how full of solace her assuaging calm.

Houses were only made to live in when it is too cold or too hot or too wet to live out of doors. Any other time out of doors is best. To sleep out of doors for a month is better than a trip to Europe.—Bliss Carman in Craftsman.

Facts About Building Stone.

Almost everybody knows the rule of the masons that stone used in building should be so placed that it will lie as it lay in its natural bed when quarried. But Francis W. Hoyt in the Engineering News says that this familiar rule is not always to be depended upon and needs in many cases to be supplemented with other precautions. There are three planes of fracture known to quarrymen. The rift is the direction in which the stone splits most easily, the grain that which is next easiest, the head that which offers the greatest resistance. In a paving block the two sides represent the rift fracture, the top and bottom the grain and the ends the head. But in a quarry the natural bed is sometimes considerably inclined to the plane of the rift; hence the imperfection of the ordinary rule for placing the stone in building.

Ysleta.

St. Augustine, Fla., founded by the Spaniards in 1564, is generally said to be the oldest European settlement within the present limits of the United States, but some twenty or thirty years earlier Coronado, the Spanish conqueror and explorer, leading an expedition from the City of Mexico northward, had founded some sort of a Spanish colony at the ancient Indian village of Ysleta, in El Paso county, Tex. In the southwest it is therefore claimed that Ysleta is the oldest European settlement in the United States.—St. Louis Republic.

Good Answer.

A theological student supposed to be deficient in judgment was asked by a professor in the course of a class examination:

"Pray, Mr. E., how would you discover a fool?"

"By the questions he would ask," was the rather stunning reply.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Don't Grow Stale!

Many a man bewails his lack of success in life after he has permitted himself to get into a rut. While dreaming of success he has been as blind as a bat and slower than two snails. He blocked his own way.—Manchester Union.

Bad Stomach Makes Bad Blood.

You can not make sweet butter in a foul, unclean churn. The stomach serves as a churn in which to agitate, work up and disintegrate our food as it is being digested. If it be weak, sluggish and foul the result will be torpid, sluggish liver and bad, impure blood.

The ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are just such as best serve to correct and cure all such derangements. It is made up without a drop of alcohol in its composition; chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol. Now this glycerine is of itself a valuable medicine, instead of a deleterious agent like alcohol, especially in the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia and the various forms of indigestion. Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of it:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose. It is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs; especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric secretion. It is useful in chronic intestinal dyspepsia, especially the flatulent variety, and in certain forms of chronic constipation, stimulating the secretory and excretory functions of the intestinal glands.

When combined, in just the right proportions, with Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Blood-root and Mandrake root, or the extracts of these, as in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, there can be no doubt of its great efficacy in the cure of all stomach and intestinal disorders and derangements. These several ingredients have the strongest endorsement in all such cases of such eminent medical leaders as Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, Chicago; Prof. Robert A. Hare, M. D., of Medical Department, University of Pa.; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Medical Department, University of New York; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Medical College, Chicago; Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., and Prof. John King, M. D., Authors of the American Dispensatory, and scores of others among the leading medical men of our land.

Who can doubt the curative virtues of a medicine the ingredients of which have such a professional endorsement?

Constipation cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. - One or two a dose.

Our Washington Letter.

BY EARL W. MAYO.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Kentucky isn't going to be committed to appropriating $50,000 of Uncle Sam's money for the benefit of frogs and Frenchmen. When the House Committee on Agriculture was engaged this week in going over the its of the big appropriation bill, Representative Trimble of Kentucky jumped to his feet when the item of $50,000 for the Biological Survey was reached. It developed that this amount was wanted to permit of inventing a frog into the best means for propagating frogs and to discover just what waters their hind legs would grow best and quickest. Mr. Trimble declared with true Kentucky eloquence that frog legs weren't fit to eat anyway and that only Frenchmen showed such depraved tastes. So out went the item!

The election of William Alden Smith, of Michigan, to the Senate has led to an investigation of the records with a view to ascertaining just how many of this noted family have occupied seats in the Upper House of Congress. They are a numerous clan and were well represented in the Continental Congress. The first Smith, however, to occupy a seat in the Senate came from Tennessee. He was Daniel Smith, and was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the Resignation of Andrew Jackson. Under the appointment he served three months, but was duly elected in 1805 and served until 1809. From 1809 to 1838 the records show that no Smith wore the toga. In the latter year New Jersey sent James Smith, Jr., Democrat, to the Senate, and he served one full term. Peculiarly enough, William Alden Smith is the first Republican of that name to occupy a seat in the Rich Man's Club.

Chairman Burton of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors this week lifted the flood gate and tumbling onto the floor came the greatest appropriation bill ever presented in the American Congress for the development of the nation's waterways. Probably no bill of the present session has received such exhaustive and searching attention as this measure. The country at large recognizes that if present prosperity is to continue the waterways must be developed to provide a new means of transportation, for it has been shown plainly and painfully that the commerce of the United States has far outstripped the railroads' capacity to handle it. There is certain to be much acrimonious debate over the passage of the bill, for the reason that a vast number of meritorious enterprises believe they should be recognized more liberally. This will lead to a rapid crossfire of debate, but it is morally certain that it will not in any sense imperil the passage of the measure because of the general recognition that the subject requires a broad and patriotic consideration if the nation's rivers and harbors as a whole are to be steadily bettered. Congressmen Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, as president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, has labored for years to obtain for waterways improvement the recognition that its importance demands. As a result, his colleagues are extending their hearty congratulations on the extent of the present bill. Mr. Ransdell declares, however, that the National Rivers and Harbors Congress will not relax its efforts nor modify its demand that an annual appropriation of not less than $50,000 be made to carry on this great work that is of such vital importance to the business interests of the entire country.

Chicken Law Upheld by Court of Appeals.

In affirming judgment of the Garrard Circuit Court in a case of John Diamond against the Commonwealth, in which the appellant was convicted on an indictment, under the legislative act of March, 1904, making chicken-stealing a felony, the Court of Appeals Thursday upheld the constitutionality of that act. The opinion of the court was delivered by Chief Justice O'Rear.

2,700 Bondholders Sued.

James C. Rogers, receiver of the American Reserve Bond Company, filed suit Wednesday at Lexington against 700 bondholders of the Southern Mutual Investment Company to recover $1,250,000 which is alleged to have been paid to them in excess of their proportional share of the assets and funds of the company. There were quite a number of these bondholders in this community at one time, but we do not know whether they are caught in this mess or not.

Ministers as Jurymen.

Cluke Goodpaster, found guilty of illegal voting in the Montgomery County Circuit Court Wednesday was fined $50 and sentenced to ten days in the county jail. On the jury which convicted Goodpaster were four ministers of the gospel, the Revs. H. C. Turner, J. R. Hobbs, J. B. Meacham and J. A. Joplin. It was an unusual occurrence in any court and the only instance on record in the annals of Kentucky Circuit Courts. Judge Young says the serving of ministers on juries may be unusual, but he intends to improve the juries in his district.

Johnson is now in jail under $1,000 bond awaiting the grand jury at March term of court, charged with rape.

Johnson was seen to approach the prostrate officer and picking up his hat made away with it. He was arrested and placed in jail, the case being transferred from the police court to the county court with the above result.

Albert Clay Captured.

Albert Clay, the negro desperado, who made a murderous attack on Policeman James Burke, in this city, several weeks ago while Burke was on the way to jail with him, was landed behind the bars of the Paris jail yesterday about noon, having arrived here in charge of Chief of Police Hill and Ex-Chief of Police R. O. Hughes, of Somerset, from Lexington.

Mr. Hughes arrested Clay in a dance hall near Wimpville, Tenn. He was located near by with a gang of negroes working on the Q. & C. railroad. Mr. Hughes informed us that Clay was hired in Cincinnati by an old negro man who goes out after men for the railroad; that he passed through Lexington en route to Tennessee and having located himself in a closet of the coach while passing through Lexington he excited the suspicion of the negro who hired him, and he told Mr. Hughes, his old friend, of his suspicions. Mr. Hughes had a description of Clay and soon rounded him up. Clay says he did not strike Burke, that it was another negro who came up from behind, but as there are two witnesses who saw him make the murderous attack his story won't work.

Mr. Hughes will get the $50 reward offered by the city for Clay's arrest.

City School Expects to Open Monday Morning.

Prof. George W. Chapman and the members of the School Board have been busy since the burning of our handsome school building in trying to find suitable rooms to accommodate the children, so there would be as little time lost as possible.

It was about settled yesterday that the following buildings would be occupied for the time being:

The basement of the court house for High School and Seventh grade.

Sixth grade, in the room over Rummans' Tucker & Co.'s dry goods store on Main, between Seventh and Eighth streets.

Third, Fourth, A Fifth and B Fifth in Dow's store, corner Main and Second streets.

B First and Second in basement of Public Library. A First grade, in the Shy house, opposite the ruins of the school building. This grade has been occupying this house some time for want of room in the main school building.

The correct amount of insurance held on the building and furniture is $19,500.

All of the above places named have been secured with the exception of the basement of the court house, permission having to be given by the Fiscal Court, which will be in session today and pass upon the matter.

We cannot see why any objection should be made by the Magistrates for the use of the basement for this purpose under the circumstances. It is the large children of the school that will be sent there. They will only want to be there for a few months, the children will not be allowed to go into the upper part of the building, and only one session a day is to be held. There will surely be no objections offered by the court.

The Clay-Shackleford Nuptials.

The ceremony uniting in holy bonds of wedlock, Mr. Rhodes Shackleford and Miss Anne Louise Clay was very beautifully and impressively solemnized at the Christian church Tuesday evening, the Rev. Carey E. Morgan officiating.

The church is very handsome and especially in its interior decorations and to these were added the elaborate wedding decorations of Southern smilax, brides roses and carnations. The canopy above the baptism was heavily draped in smilax, and from this ropes of the same green extended down each aisle to the posts of smilax and ferns entwined among which were hundreds of rose buds, lilies of the valley, hyacinths and carnations.

The pulpit where the bridal party stood was banked in ferns and palms. Graceful ropes of smilax hung from the railing. Behind a screen of the same green sat the harpist, violinist and organist, who rendered sweet music during the evening. At the appointed hour Lohengrin wedding march heralded the coming of the bridal party.

First came the ushers, Mr. John M. Brennan, of Paris, and Mr. J. A. Sullivan, of Richmond, Mr. J. J. Greenleaf, of Richmond, and Mr. W. C. Alford, Lexington, following; then came the bridegroom, Mr. Rhodes Shackleford, with his best man, Mr. James C. Stone, of Louisville. Then came the bridesmaids all gowned in beautiful creations of white Paris muslin and lace, carrying bouquets of bride's roses. Miss Kate Alexander and Miss Sarah Shackleford, sister of the groom, came first followed by Miss Helen Bennett and Miss Mary Clay. From the right of the pulpit the bride came on the arm of her maid of honor, Miss Nancy Clay. The bride was magnificently gowned in an exquisite lace robe of Egyptian handwork. Her only ornaments were handsome pearls, which were heirlooms in the Clay family. The brides bouquet was a huge bunch of lilies of the valley tied with a bow of tulle. The maid of honor wore a lovely pink lace gown and wore gloves and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Among the many beautiful bridal presents was noted a chest of silver the gift of the bride's father. It was of Colonial style, exquisitely carved. The bride is the eldest daughter of the Honorable Cassius M. Clay and possesses rare accomplishments and is much admired among a host of friends throughout the bluegrass.

The bridal party was entertained after the wedding by Mr. and Mrs. J. Miller Ward at their handsome home on South Main street.

Valuable Ear of Corn.

A single ear of Reid Yellow Dent corn, weighing 19 ounces, sold at the Iowa State College for the phenomenal price of $150, which is at the rate of $3,850 per bushel. Each kernel is worth 13 cents. Pascal, of DeWitt, a member of the Iowa Corn Growers' Association, who grew this remarkable ear, was its purchaser at the sale, which has eclipsed all previous prices for corn and established a world's record.

The great champion single ear last year brought only $11, and was grown by H. J. Ross, of Farragut, Ia. The second grand championship last year was won by Fred Hethershaw, of Des Moines, and sold for $7. The grand championship last year were those belonging to O. J. Easton, of Whitney, and sold for $30, which at that time was the highest price ever paid for that amount of seed corn.

How It Struck Her.

"You seemed greatly impressed," said the minister, "with my description of how they brought the head of John the Baptist before the king on a salver."
"Yes," sighed Mrs. De Style; "I was thinking how much better they trained servants in those days. Now, mine, when they bring me things, are forever forgetting the salver!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A SOCIABLE COMPANION.

The Chatty Traveler Who Charmed
Ralph Waldo Emerson.

It is related that Ralph Waldo Emerson was once on his way to California when he was joined by a man who was altogether so sociable and chatty that an otherwise tedious journey was rendered quite cheerful. This man's name was Sackett, and he told Mr. Emerson that he resided in San Francisco. Mr. Sackett indicated all the points of interest along the way, related a lot of amusing anecdotes and, best of all, was also an attentive listener. The consequence was that Mr. Emerson came to the conclusion that Mr. Sackett was as charming a man as he had ever met, and it was in this positive conviction that he accepted Mr. Sackett's invitation to dine with him immediately upon their arrival in San Francisco. The next morning Mr. Emerson was astonished and annoyed to find in all the local papers this startling personal notice: "Professor Ralph Waldo Emerson, the eminent philosopher, scholar and poet, is in our city as the guest of J. Sackett, the well known proprietor of the Bush Street Dime museum. Matinees every half hour. Admission only 10 cents. The double headed calf and the dog faced boy this week!"

Helping an Invalid.

A trained nurse mentions as among the little things that help make an invalid feel comfortable and rested the frequent brushing of the hair and bathing of the hands and face. "I don't know what it is, whether these actions just divert the invalid's mind or really do effect some physical change for the better, but they certainly help the sick one to get through the day. Eau de Cologne and the various toilet waters are very refreshing when added to the water or used independently. I once heard a man say that if he couldn't both wash his hands and face and comb his hair in the morning when he got up he would choose to comb his hair. It would wake him up better. He felt something of the same sense of physical comfort as the average convalescent or invalid."

Woman Doctor Indicted.

Dr. Sarah Murphy was Saturday indicted for the wilful murder of Katie Bryant, the Buffalo, Ky., girl who died in Louisville from a criminal operation, and Horace Lampton, a traveling salesman, of Dayton, O., was indicted as an accessory before the fact for procuring the operation.

New Machine Shop.

Mr. Joseph Newhall, the expert machinist, has made arrangements with Mr. J. J. Connelly the plumber, to open an up-to-date machine shop in the rear of his plumbing shop. His phone will be No. 180 and he invites the patronage of everyone who are in need of an expert to look after their machinery. 29-2t

Congress.

The principal subject for consideration in the House during the week will be the River and Harbor Appropriation Bill, and it is expected to consume several days' time. A strenuous effort will be made by the combined Illinois and Missouri delegations to secure the incorporation of the provisions for a fourteen-foot waterway from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi river.

A Trust Scheme.

Charges that the Copper Trust is creating an artificial scarcity of the metal by storing vast quantities in certain places, and that it is even keeping a large amount on board a vessel as ballast, having it carried about from place to place, without destination, are embodied in affidavits which have been sent to Attorney General Bonaparte at Washington.

13,000,000 Possible Soldiers.

More than 13,000,000 men in the United States are available for military service, according to the report of the military secretary of the army concerning the militia, which has just been made public. Of this number 112,390 men are organized in State militia.

New York leads the list in the number of men available for duty, having 1,294,000. Ohio is second with 1,085,110; Illinois third with 1,089,559, and Pennsylvania fourth with 1,017,000. In the organized militia New York leads with 14,711. Pennsylvania is next with 9,836 and Illinois follows third, with 6,612.

The report includes the comments of officers who inspected the various state organizations. In nearly all cases they urge larger appropriation and better equipment for the militia.

DELIBERATE SUICIDE.

Why It Should Excite More Horror Than Any Other Murder.

As to its moral aspects, suicide is manifestly forbidden by the divine law. One of the commandments of the Decalogue declares, "Thou shalt not kill." To make the law as comprehensive as possible it is not said, "Thou shalt not kill thy neighbor," which qualifying phrase is employed in some of the other commandments—as, for instance, "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor;" "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house." The prohibition to kill is therefore absolute. It forbids the taking of human life, whether by suicide or homicide.

There is another commandment which says, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Now, the love which we owe to our neighbor forbids us to slay him, and therefore the love which we owe to ourselves forbids us to compass our own death. If the law allowed us to kill ourselves, while forbidding us to kill our neighbor, our love for our neighbor would not be equal, but superior, to our love for ourselves.

Nay, I hold that suicide is a more revolting sin than the killing of another. The closer the ties of relationship between the murderer and his victim the more atrocious is the crime. In the estimation of mankind, a parricide, or matricide, or fratricide, or uxoricide, is a more shocking criminal than an ordinary homicide. And as a man has more intimate relations to himself than to a parent or brother or wife, his deliberate self destruction should excite more horror than the murder of a parent, brother or wife.—Cardinal Gibbons in Century.

BEECHER'S ONLY POEM.

The Verses Were Always Kept Sacred by Mrs. Beecher.

It was related by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher that during their courtship Mr. Beecher once "dropped into poetry" and wrote a few lines of verse teeming with affection for his sweetheart. But the verses were always kept sacred by Mrs. Beecher, and nothing could win them from her. One day Mr. and Mrs. Beecher were in the office of Robert Bonner, the publisher.

"Why don't you write a poem, Beecher?" said Mr. Bonner.
"He did once," said Mrs. Beecher. "Recite it for me, won't you, Mrs. Beecher?"

But the eyes of the great preacher were riveted on his wife, and she knew that he meant silence.

"Come," said Mr. Bonner, "I'll give you $5,000 if you will recite that poem to me," addressing Mrs. Beecher.

"Why, it ran"—quickly said Mrs. Beecher.

"Eunice!" simply said Mr. Beecher.

And, although Robert Bonner afterward offered to double the sum first offered, he never got the poem from Mrs. Beecher. It had been hidden away by Mrs. Beecher and cherished as one of the dearest treasures her husband left her.

Persian Rugs.

"Antique Persian rugs," said the rug salesman, "are dyed with vegetable dyes; the new ones are dyed with aniline dyes. There's a great difference. Vegetable dyes are fifty or sixty times more expensive than anilines, and they give a color that is literally imperishable, a color that keeps growing richer and richer till the rug falls to pieces. Anilines, made out of coal tar, look well enough at first, but they fade. When a vegetable red or blue would be at its best an aniline red or blue would be nearly white. We civilized people harmed the Chinese by introducing our cheap opium among them, and now we have equally harmed the Persian rug by introducing our cheap anilines among the rug weavers."

The Hydrophobia Menace.

Since hydrophobia is transmitted by inoculation and its virus resides in the saliva of its victim, the only absolute safeguard is to keep dogs muzzled when at large. A muzzle is a nuisance no doubt and in the immense majority of cases needless, for almost invariably the mischief maker is the stray cur, belonging to no one in particular and coming from nobody knows where. But it seems impracticable to frame an effective regulation for the protection of the public from such irresponsible and dangerous creatures without making it applicable to all dogs.—New York Tribune.

Limit of Economy.

"I don't mind a young man economizing when he is out with me," sighed the girl, "but it seems to me that when he takes you in a penny in the slot machine parlor, drops a penny in a slot and hands you one of the ear things while he takes the other the limit has just about been reached. Of course you can hear the opera almost as well with one ear, but how does it look?"—New York Press.

Charity.

The lady was making some remarks about the kind of clothes some other ladies at church had on.

"The finest garment a woman can wear," said her husband, "is the mantle of charity."

"Yes," she snapped, "and it's about the only one some husbands want their wives to wear."

The Fun of It.

"Why did you do that?" demanded the teacher.

"Oh, just for fun," replied Tommy.

"But didn't you know it was against the rules?"

"Sure! Dat's where de fun comes in."—Philadelphia Press.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a tea spoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. # HEART of GOLD

A St. Valentine's Day Story
By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1906, by Charles W. Hooke.

I PAUSED outside the door of Austen's studio and fixed a dollar bill so that a corner of it would stick out of my waistcoat pocket. There was no use asking him whether he needed money. He would always repel the insinuation, even when he hadn't had any luncheon and was fierce-eyed with hunger. Neither could he be caught by an open display of coin or bills, but if a bit of money was in sight and Austen didn't know that the owner thereof was aware of it he would betray his need by occasional glances full of gentle and pathetic longing.

Let me hasten to say that Austen was not a failure in the ordinary, old-fashioned way. He used to make a good living from illustrations, cover designs and the better kind of potboiling in general, but he had a serious illness, and while he lay unconscious some of his friends became over-anxious and called in too much medical talent. In the present state of the world Austen might better have died, perhaps, than have contracted such a heavy debt. He paid it and hadn't a penny with which to begin work.

Conditions have changed in the last ten or fifteen years, and capital is essential to the artist. Life presses him so hard that he can't both work and live unless he has money in the bank or enjoys some form of special favor from those who have. Otherwise he will be like a swimmer in an undertow—the best that he can hope for is to keep his nose above water.

When I entered the studio, Austen was admiring the last fruit of his own toil. It was a little thing in oil, a girl looking at a shield which bore a device of a heart of gold and a scroll in which one could discover the date Feb. 14.

I took it to be a cover design for a February issue of a magazine or for some special purpose incident to St. Valentine's day, and I deplored the waste of time. It was then the tenth day of the shortest month, and this thing could not be used by anybody until next year.

"What do you think of it?" he asked. "It's a beauty," I replied. "You'll sell it—if you live."

"No, I won't," said he, with decision. "I didn't make it to sell."

My mouth was open to reply that he shouldn't make anything for any other purpose when the picture itself checked me. A flash of memory illumined my understanding.

"Isn't that the girl—I saw her only once—the girl who?"

"Yes," said he, interrupting. "It is the girl who makes all other girls look like—like the crude and meaningless objects which I usually draw when I try to draw girls. But this is different, isn't it?"

"My boy, you are right," said I. "This is the only genuine, and all others are base imitations. What are you going to do with it?"

"I shall commit the gross absurdity of sending it to her as a valentine," said he. "Wish I could afford a frame, but I can't. The express charges will wind me up. In fact—His eye at that moment lighted upon the green bait protruding from my waistcoat pocket, and he gave a little gasp as a man sometimes will when his stomach is empty."

"However," he continued, "she won't be bound to go to the expense of framing it. She can ask the butler to set it in the back cellar just as it is and quent than they used to be, but we are still imperfectly civilized, and there are parts of the golden wall which a poor man can see over. Austen was both susceptible and constant and likely to have trouble enough without adding a hopeless love.

I did not then know that Miss Copeland had any considerable sum of money in her own right or any expectations beyond the share in her father's estate which would eventually fall to her, which, unless I misjudged Mr. Copeland, would not be liberal if his daughter should marry a poor man, and might be nothing at all. The true state of the young lady's finances has since become known to me, and I am willing to admit that my conduct toward Austen was not calculated to subserve his best worldly interests.

In short, to drop the style of envious sarcasm which we who live in cities

"I'M GLAD YOU PUT ME ON TO THIS," HE SAID.

now adopt when we speak of the rich, I honestly thought that it would be a double error for Austen to send this remarkable valentine to Miss Copeland. In the first place, he couldn't afford to do so, for the picture was amazingly good, and with a slight suppression of the likeness, would certainly be salable some time. In the second place, it could not fail to evoke an answer from Miss Copeland and thus revive an acquaintance which could only result in pain and disappointment to my friend.

"Billy," said I, "you mustn't commit this folly. Here's the best thing you have ever done, and you ought to work it so that you can set yourself on your feet again."

"Yes?" said he. "How hard do you suppose the express company will swat me to take this out to Morristown?" And again he eyed the corner of my dollar.

I argued the case with him, but I might as well have addressed my remarks to the jointed dummy of wood which he used as a model. The best I could do was to persuade him to hold the picture two or three days before sending it. He had intended to ship it right away, in fear lest the landlord might do something disagreeable in the way of padlocking the door or otherwise attempting to collect the rent by violence.

I lent Austen the dollar, and while he was holding it in his hand and contemplating it with a trance-like stare I deftly picked the inside breast pocket of his waistcoat, which he had fastened to the bookcase with a thumb tack. From this pocket I drew an envelope containing all that was left of Austen's pawnable possessions, and I succeeded in getting the ticket for a fine suit of clothes which he had bought just before his illness. Then, having restored the envelope with the remainder of its contents, I departed hastily.

After visiting the pawnbroker's and a little tailor's shop I called upon the art editor of one of our leading magazines, and, having justified my visit by some rather neat lying, I said to him:

"Who's buying Harry Austen's stuff now?"

"Didn't know anybody was," he replied.

"You want to wake up," said I.

"He has caught on."

"How do you mean?" said he.

"He's been doing some swell stuff."

I replied, "and it isn't for sale. When I was in his studio this afternoon there was a man trying to induce him to sell a cover design—splendid thing it was, too—and Austen wouldn't let go."

"Did he say it was ordered?"

"No," said I. "He could sell it, but he won't. He's feeling pretty sure of himself these days. I shouldn't be surprised if your friends across the square were stocking up with some of his work."

"Tell him to come down here and see me," said the editor.

"He won't," said I. "He's got something else on his mind."

The editor drummed on his table and whistled softly. I was afraid to say a word more and instantly took my departure.

I went across the square to those "friends" of the editor's whom I had mentioned to him. There I found, of course, another magazine's art editor, and to him I told the same tale. Then I met a good fellow on the street who knew Austen, and I prevailed upon him to carry my story into two other publishing houses.

About lunchtime the next day I went to the building where Austen has his studio and nearly ran into my friend and art editor No. 1. They were going out to luncheon together on the A. E.'s treat, which he would subsequently work into an expensive bill. I dodged behind the elevator shaft and then followed cautiously. When I had trailed them to a restaurant, I ran over to get art editor No. 2 and brought him to that same chophouse.

"By jingo!" I whispered as we came in. "That accounts for it."

He looked across to where Austen and art editor No. 1 were sitting, and then he drew a long breath.

"I'm glad you put me on to this," he said. "Austen must be right in it. This is the first time in a year that I've seen him with his trousers pressed." I blessed myself for my visit to the pawnbroker and the little tailor and also thanked Providence that I had put a two dollar bill into the pocket of the trousers. Otherwise Austen might have pawned the suit again when the tailor brought it around to the studio.

About 5 o'clock that afternoon I dropped in upon Austen. He was smoking a good cigar and sketching a design in charcoal on a canvas.

He shut his teeth hard upon the cigar and looked at me with half shut eyes.

"Well, blast your bloomin' top lights, they didn't get it!" said he.

"Who didn't get what?" said I.

"I've had three of 'em here today," he responded. "Went to lunch with Harrison. Yes, yes; you were there. I forgot. Well, after lunch we came back here, and Harrison made another play for my valentine. Actually offered me cash, and he tried to find out what I was going to do with it. Didn't recognize the portrait. Thought I'd got a new model, confound him. After he was gone Jarbeau appeared. I think he'd been waiting around outside."

Jarbeau was the art editor whom I had taken to luncheon.

"I had a similar circus with him, except that he was sure that my pic was for Harrison," he continued.

"Well—a—well! He offered cash too. If I hadn't just eaten a full meal the temptation would have killed me."

"Good clothes sustain a man, too," said I, and he grinned at me.

"Markham was in later," said he. "He was very easy."

Markham was one of the men whom my emissary had seen.

"And you didn't sell?" I asked.

"Not for a million dollars. Sell her? I guess not. I agreed after considerable persuasion"—and he grinned with great enjoyment—"to do something else for the gentlemen. They agreed to pay cash—because they thought I didn't need it, shiver their blasted timbers!"

"But the valentine goes," he added.

"Nothing can stop that now. Heart of gold! The dross of this world cannot buy my poor tribute which I shall lay at her feet. And a little—just a wee little bit—of hope will go with it now."

There was a moment's pause. Then he softly repeated the word "dross," which he had uttered with a fine scorn, and at the same time he put both hands into the side pockets of the coat which I had redeemed, and when he pulled them out they were full of money.

However, lest I should seem to be taking credit to myself for the success of a man now widely praised and greatly envied, let me explain that my little coup was nothing to the one which Austen himself achieved. I shudder to think what he would have lost if he had sold the valentine as I had planned.

For the memory portrait of Miss Copeland made a tremendous hit in that young lady's exalted social sphere. It started Austen on a brilliant and remunerative career as a painter of portraits for those fortunate persons who can afford to lavish money on a good man's work, and it was thus that he gained a position which enabled him to win the hand of the lady without exposing her to the paternal malediction. In fact, the old gentleman behaved very nicely.

How Many Points on Our Stars?

Most of us, if asked how many points a star should have would say five and cite the flag as proof, but the director of the mint has corrected this misapprehension in answering an inquiry on the subject. He calls attention to the fact that the stars on the great seal of the United States and on the seal of the president are five pointed, but that the stars are six pointed on the seal of the house of representatives, and, further, to the six pointed stars on the obverse of the half and quarter dollar coins and the five pointed stars on the reverse. The reverse of these coins is a copy of the great seal with the clouds and stars omitted. So far as known, the six pointed star comes from copying the colonial coins made after the manner of English heraldry, which sanctions that star. The stars on the flag are copied from the Washington coat of arms.—Youth's Companion.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH.

A Daring Young Adventurer With a Thrilling Career.

Captain John Smith of Willoughby, Lincolnshire, was the man to whom the success of the first English permanent settlement in North America was directly due. Though only twenty-six when the expedition sailed with him on board, he had already enjoyed such a succession of thrilling experiences as was the lot of few men even in the adventurous age of Elizabeth. At the age of sixteen he had entered on a military career in France and the Low Countries. In 1600 he sought service against the Turks, who were then at the height of their power and had only lately ceased to threaten Vienna itself. On the way to the east he was thrown overboard as a pirate, from whom his inexhaustible resourcefulness enabled him to escape after a time. He then entered the Austrian service and soon signalized himself by a series of brilliant exploits. One of these, the defeat of three Turkish champions in single fight, earned him his well known coat of arms, "three Turks' heads in a shield," from Sigismund Bathori, prince of Transylvania. Later he was taken prisoner by the Turks and owed his escape to the interest with which he inspired a Turkish lady. "Whatever might happen," as Gardiner says, "he was always able to turn it to account. In the worst dangers he knew what was the right thing to be done."—London Outlook.

PRECOCIOUS JOHN DAVY.

Childhood Incident of the Author of "The Bay of Biscay."

An interesting anecdote of the youth of John Davy, who composed the famous song "The Bay of Biscay," shows how decided and precocious was this musician's aptitude for the art he ultimately practiced with artistic if not financial success. John Davy was born near Exeter in 1765. At the age of six he evinced a passion for music, which he sought every means of gratifying. He was in want of a musical instrument and determined to provide himself with one of however rough a nature. So from a neighboring smithy he purloined twenty to thirty horse-shoes. From these he selected as many as formed a complete octave and, having suspended them in an upper room, amused himself by imitating upon them the chimes of the neighboring church of Crediton.

By these and other means he obtained a knowledge of music which some thirty years later enabled him to produce many dramatic pieces and such songs as "Just Like Love," "The Death of the Smuggler" and "The Bay of Biscay," only the last of which has remained popular.

After twenty years' work in London Davy died in St. Martin's lane in 1824. He was buried in St. Martin's churchyard.—London Chronicle.

Flowerpots.

All new flowerpots require to be soaked in water and allowed to dry thoroughly before being used. The soil does not hang well to the sides of garden pots unless so treated. Dirty pots are open to the same objection. Let any one try to put a plant with fresh soil into a pot which has been used before and left unwashed, and he will find in a few days, when the soil begins to dry, that it leaves a space and does not adhere as it should to the sides of it. No plant can possibly flourish under such circumstances. The roots of a plant draw to the sides of a pot naturally in search of moisture, and growth of course is checked if a current of air is allowed to pass between them and the sides. Some plants exhibit this tendency in such a remarkable degree that few roots are to be seen, except a network on the outside of the soil next the pot.

Digestible Food.

One of the biggest mistakes about food which people make is to forget that the true value of food to anybody is the measure of its digestibility. Half a pound of cheese is vastly more nourishing as regards its mere composition than half a pound of beef, but while the beef will be easily digested and thus be of vast service to us the cheese is put out of court altogether for ordinary folks by reason of its indigestibility. We should bear this rule in mind when we hear people comparing one food with another in respect to their chemical value.—London Hospital.

Fish, Flesh, Herring.

"Neither fish nor flesh nor good red herring" occurs in Dryden's epilogue to his Duke of Guise (182). The epilogue takes the form of a dialogue between the actress who spoke it and a trimmer and ends with this exclamation:

D—neuters, in their middle way of steering.
They're neither fish nor flesh nor good red herring.

—Macmillan's Magazine.

"Now," said the physician, "you will have to eat plain food and not stay out late at night."

"Yes," replied the patient, "that is what I have been thinking ever since you sent in your bill."

"The charming debutante upsets all received maxims."

"How so?"

"By proving that a miss can also be a hit."—Baltimore American.

A FOOLISH PLAN

"It's a joy to eat—I welcome my dinner hours! Because I rout indigestion with August Flower!"

Constipation is the result of indigestion, biliousness, flatulency, loss of appetite, self-poisoning, anemia, emaciation, uric acid, neuralgia in various parts of the system, catarrhal inflammation of the intestinal canal and numerous other ailments that rob life of its pleasures if they do not finally rob you of life itself.

"I'm bound in the bowels," is a common expression of people who look miserable and are miserable—yet who persist in "letting nature take its course."

What a foolish plan, when nature could be aided by the use of Green's August Flower, which is nature's own remedy for constipation and all stomach ills.

August Flower gives new life to the liver and insures healthy stools.

know that my feelings are safe, because I shall never find out what becomes of it."

"Isn't she in the city?"

"No," said he. "I guess the family will live in Morristown all winter unless they go abroad. I've been asked to go out, but I haven't any clothes, and the round trip costs $120. The chances are, old man, that I shall never see her again, and so I thought I'd better paint this portrait from memory right now. I'm in danger of forgetting her," he added, with a mournful smile.

On the contrary, it had been my opinion that Austen was very greatly in danger of not forgetting her. She was, to all intents and purposes, an inhabitant of another planet, and it was extremely unfortunate that he had ever met her. These accidents are less fre-
